Headline:
Dry with bright spells.

Today:
A largely dry day with some hazy sunshine through the morning. Turning greyer in the afternoon as cloud builds from the northwest, though the southeast retaining some glimmers of brightness. Mild, with a moderate south-westerly breeze through the day. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Tonight:
Thicker cloud will spread widely over the region, bringing light rain and drizzle at times later this evening and overnight. Murky conditions developing over high ground. Mild, with winds easing. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Wednesday:
Light rain will slowly move south, stagnating across southern areas during the afternoon, although turning very patchy. Some hazy sunshine following further north and feeling a touch fresher here. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Brightening up after a grey start on Thursday. Windier with some rain on Friday. Brighter again, but with a few showers on Saturday. Daytime temperatures still a little above average.
